Kevin Myson has a general corporate commercial law practice with a focus on commercial transactions, energy and natural resources, mergers and acquisitions, and transportation matters.

Kevin acts for energy companies on a broad range of commercial transactions, both in Canada and internationally. He regularly represents clients in the negotiation and drafting of agreements relating to the development of petroleum, natural gas and oil sands assets, including joint venture, operation, maintenance, service and other project agreements. Kevin also assists clients in the acquisition and divestiture of energy-related projects, infrastructure and assets.

Kevin regularly acts for large rail and intermodal entities on transportation matters, including the negotiation of crude rail transloading and freight agreements. In addition, Kevin also assists funds, producers, governmental entities and other end-users with ISDA master agreements and related documentation. Kevin's diverse practice and legal experience allows him to provide innovative and practical solutions to businesses in a variety of different industries. Clients routinely seek his advice on complex and unique legal matters due to his pragmatic and business-oriented approach.
